March To Parliament Halted By Cops; Agitation To Continue Till Pradhan Resigns, Says CJP

@timesofindia.com

New Delhi: Well before the scheduled 9am "Sansad Chalo" march, Jantar Mantar had already filled to the brim. By 6am, supporters had begun pouring in, many having spent the night at the protest site while others travelled from across the country before dawn to join the call. By morning, not only the protest venue, but roads stretching nearly a kilometre in every direction were packed with people, with crowds spilling onto adjoining stretches of Sansad Marg and other parts of central Delhi.

With several approach roads and nearby Metro station exits barricaded, many supporters walked long distances to reach the venue. While barricades remained around the protest site, the main entry barricade had been opened and bag checks were not carried out. Even then, entering the venue was a challenge, as supporters stood shoulder to shoulder inside the barricaded area. Around the stage, some pushing and jostling briefly created stampede-like situations before CJP volunteers intervened.

The protest site reverberated with chants of "Dharmendra Pradhan istifa do", "Paper leak nahi sahenge" and "Bharat Mata ki jai", even as mobile jammers deployed around the venue left protesters and journalists struggling to communicate. People from all walks of life had gathered for the march – students, parents carrying young children, elderly supporters and people who had travelled overnight from different states. Volunteers formed human chains to regulate movement inside the packed venue, while others distributed water and guided supporters through the dense crowd.

Although the march had been scheduled to begin at 9am, it was delayed for nearly three hours as CJP representatives waited for climate activist Sonam Wangchuk, who had sought discharge from Safdarjung Hospital to join the procession. During the wait, they kept the crowd engaged from the stage where AAP functionaries Atishi and Sanjay Singh as well as actor Shabana Azmi were present. Wangchuk's wife Gitanjali J Angmo addressed the gathering, urging supporters to remain peaceful.

Around noon, Angmo announced that Opposition MPs had assured the delegation that Wangchuk's demands would be raised in Parliament, calling it the "first step" towards dialogue. She then requested CJP founder Abhijit Dipke to end his indefinite hunger strike and offered him juice to break his fast. Earlier in the morning, the three AISA activists — Neha, Ameen Amitoj and Manish Kumar — who had remained on an indefinite hunger strike alongside Wangchuk for 23 days had also broken their fast.

With Wangchuk unable to leave the hospital and the crowd growing impatient, CJP representatives finally decided to proceed with the march. Around 1pm, Dipke, CJP spokesperson Ratna Singh, Angmo and Shabana Azmi were escorted through thousands of supporters to a truck stationed behind the protest site.

Holding a portrait of Dr B R Ambedkar, Dipke climbed atop the vehicle as volunteers and other leaders boarded it, before asking protesters to begin marching towards Parliament. The procession, however, moved barely 500 metres — from Jantar Mantar to near Kerala House — before being stopped by heavy police deployment. Ahead stood CRPF personnel forming a human chain with shields and batons, backed by multiple layers of barricades erected to prevent the march from proceeding further. Police repeatedly announced that prohibitory orders under Section 163 of BNSS were in force and asked protesters to disperse.

What followed was a prolonged police action. It began with pushing and shoving as protesters tried to move ahead. As repeated attempts were made to breach the barricades, cops lathi-charged them. Protesters scattered, only to regroup minutes later and surge forward again. The cycle repeated itself for over three hours, with the truck carrying the CJP representatives remaining stranded at the same spot.

As police action intensified, the protest spilled beyond Kerala House. Groups of protesters ran towards Windsor Place, Connaught Place, Ashoka Road and other parts of central Delhi, where fresh confrontations broke out. Police again used lathi-charge and teargas shells to disperse the crowds, while many protesters later made their way back towards Jantar Mantar. Several protesters retaliated by hurling water bottles, slippers and other objects, even as CJP volunteers repeatedly appealed to them to remain peaceful.

Around 4pm, a police team reached the truck, smashed one of its window panes and climbed aboard. Azmi and Ratna were taken away while Dipke and Angmo remained inside the vehicle, surrounded by volunteers. Ambulances and riot-control vehicles, including teargas units, moved through the crowd as the operation continued. Protesters also pulled down several barricades in an attempt to move ahead, while the arrival of Bhim Army chief Chandrashekhar Azad further swelled the gathering and intensified sloganeering.

By evening, roads leading towards Parliament continued to witness heavy police deployment as repeated rounds of lathi-charge and teargas shelling were used to disperse protesters and restore traffic. Near Ashoka Road, teargas shells were fired at groups gathered on the road, sending protesters running in different directions. Many were seen bleeding from head injuries, while others helped carry the injured to safety. CJP claimed 40-50 protesters, including women, sustained injuries during the police action, though an independent count could not be verified.

While the confrontation unfolded on the streets, a CJP delegation met Union minister J P Nadda and submitted a memorandum of demands. CJP said it was assured the issues would be taken up at the appropriate level. However, it maintained the agitation would continue until its demands, including the resignation of Union education minister Dharmendra Pradhan, were met.

As darkness fell, Dipke, Angmo, Saurav Das and Ashutosh Ranka remained seated in the stranded truck near Kerala House, declaring their "peaceful protest is not ending" till their demands are met, while supporters gathered around them. Hundreds reconvened at Jantar Mantar to resume the protest, many with water, food and first-aid kits.

SANSAD CHALO HOW DAY UNFOLDED

6 ams Supporters begin pouring into Jantar Mantar; protest site fills up hours before the scheduled march

9 ams March scheduled to begin, but delayed as organisers wait for Sonam Wangchuk, who seeks discharge from Safdarjung Hospital to join

9 ams 12 noon CJP representatives, Opposition politicians address gathering at Jantar Mantar

12 noon onwards: Wangchuk's wife announces Opposition MPs have assured the delegation that the demands will be raised in Parliament. Dipke and three AISA activists end their indefinite hunger strike after the assurance

1 pm onwards: CJP members board a truck and the Sansad Chalo march begins. The procession reaches near Kerala House, about 500 metres from Jantar Mantar, where heavy police barricading, RAF contingents, Delhi Police deployment, seven-foot metal barricades, water cannons and anti-riot vehicles halt the march. Protesters breach barricades at multiple points—including Bank of Baroda and LIC building (CP), Rail Bhavan, Akashvani, Shram Shakti Bhavan, Transport Bhavan and Air Force Bhavan – while police use lathi-charge, teargas and loudspeaker warnings to disperse the crowd

Around 3.30 pm A CJP delegation meets Union minister JP Nadda and submits a memorandum of three key demands

Till evening Repeated lathi-charge and tear-gas shells are used as clashes continue around Jantar Mantar and roads leading to Parliament. Protesters allege they were beaten by police, while police say two personnel were injured in stone-pelting. Parliament gates closed, Section 163 of BNSS in force across Lutyens', mobile internet services suspended, gates at Janpath, Rajiv Chowk, Patel Chowk, Central Secretariat and Seva Teerth Metro stations locked

Around 6.30 pm Dipke, Wangchuk's wife and other CJP representatives remain atop the stranded truck, announcing the protest will continue till Dharmendra Pradhan resigns

Low international traffic to keep T3 pier C idle till Sept

Saurabh.Sinha
@timesofindia.com

New Delhi: The newly converted international pier C at IGI Airport's Terminal 3 is likely to remain unused till Sept due to a sharp reduction in overseas flights by IndiGo, Air India group and some other airlines, including foreign carriers, due to the US-Iran war.

Delhi International Airport Ltd had sought approvals from multiple agencies several months ago after completing the work for the pier's conversion from domestic to international as foreign air travel was booming then and India's busiest airport was running low on capacity to handle this traffic. T3 is the Delhi airport's only terminal that handles both flights and the domestic capacity had got a boost with the expanded Terminal1.

But by the time the last nod finally came in late June, there was not enough traffic to fill it up. With July-Sept being a traditionally low travel period and things likely to look up from the festival season, pier C will be made operational as and when traffic picks up from Sept or Oct.

Till last year, IGIA used to handle an average 2.2 lakh passengers daily — 1.6 lakh domestic across T1, T2 and T3, and 60,000 international at T3. "This average has fallen by 35,000-40,000 daily, with the international drop in the range of 10,000-15,000 and the remaining being the knock-on effect on domestic traffic since Noida Airport opened on June 15," said a source.

"Depending on how oil prices play out and the overall geopolitical situation, things may look up with the start of the winter schedule. Airlines' woes are well known, but airports are suffering a lot too," the source added. IGIA now sees an average 1,300 flights daily, nearly a fifth less than 1,550 in the G20 days just about three years ago.

The war has proven to be the proverbial last straw for international travel to and from India — especially the West. The Pakistan airspace has been closed for Indian carriers for nearly 15 months now, and vice-versa, post Operation Sindoor, due to which the western routes have become very long and unviable. While foreign airlines fly straight from the UAE to the US, Air India, IndiGo, AI Express and Akasa have to take much longer circuitous routes. The closure of Pakistan airspace impacts north India, with Delhi, being the biggest hub here, the most. International flights between the West and Mumbai, Bengaluru, Hyderabad, Chennai and Kerala don't need to overfly Pakistan's airspace.

Over 170 injured taken to central govt hosps

New Delhi: More than 170 people, including CJP protesters and police personnel, were brought to central govt hospitals Monday, with a young woman in critical condition at Safdarjung Hospital, according to sources.

Hospital sources said around 150 injured were brought to Dr Ram Manohar Lohia (RML) Hospital, while at least two dozen were treated at Lady Hardinge Medical College (LHMC). Many of the injured were discharged after first aid. RML officials said that till 7pm, the surgery department had registered 65 medico-legal cases (MLCs), including protesters and a few cops, adding that detailed information was awaited. Officials also said around 10 MLCs were registered for people on hunger strike, all of whom were stable.

Hospital sources said around 40 of those brought to RML were police personnel, while the rest were protesters. Around 35 patients were admitted, while the others were treated and discharged. Seven to eight patients required care in the red zone because of the severity of their injuries.

Among the injured was a woman, around 20 years old, who has sustained a hypoxic brain injury, a condition in which the brain suffers damage due to inadequate oxygen supply following severe trauma, hospital sources said. The exact circumstances leading to her injuries were not clear. Hospital sources said it was possible she was injured during the melee or after falling in the ensuing stampede.

Hospital sources said most of the other injuries comprised bruises, lathi marks, head injuries and facial injuries, including split lips, forehead wounds and scalp lacerations.
